

Himalayan Blackberries

The Himalayan blackberries are growing along roadsides, over fences, and invading pastures. It is a native western European plant that is very aggressive. It reproduces both vegetatively and through seed production.

Himalayan blackberries quickly form impenetrable thickets, consisting of both live and dead canes choking out all growth under the plant.